

BaghBolour Villa

This is a story of people who have been distanced from nature. A young couple along with their little child wanted to spend the holidays at a place away from the city and in the nature. The villa's land was a green range. Considering the employer's main demand, which was to utilize the outside space as much as possible, we analyzed the Bagh-e Bolor project as the following manner: supplying adequate natural lighting and green landscaping throughout all spaces is one of the most essential shaping lines of the building's design. On one hand, the building's usage required the introversion privacy of a home, and on the other hand it needed the extroversion of a villa in interacting with the outside space. Creating transparent surfaces for achieving a dynamic and manageable spaces on all levels in order to utilize the garden's view and being able to control the children when playing there,

Human With Different Motivations & Sights!

