Area: 130 square meters

The residence is establishing a meaningful link with a place that can include each of the different levels of human life environment. And the settlement is a place that should be able to respond to all these levels of states, emotions, and human needs. So it can be said that architecture and residence are the containers of life and man is its container, and when the container and the container are not in harmony with each other, a feeling of need for change and transformation is created.

renovation

In renovation projects, this feeling of need can arise due to changing user needs, lack of satisfaction, or qualitative and quantitative improvement of the biological place. Therefore, creating a sense of satisfaction, improving the quality level, and responding to the user's wishes and needs are the most important goals of these projects. However, in addition to these components, the existing limitations in the current building, such as common structures and facilities, the placement of communal openings and windows, as well as adherence to the principles of sustainability, which include spending the lowest cost and demolition and materials, are among other very important components. Are in the formation of the plan.
